Valuation Concepts and Methodologies

Fundamental Principles of Valuation

VALUATION

Value: how much a particular object is worth to a particular set of eyes
Valuation: estimation of an asset's value based on variables perceived to be related to future investment returns

CONCEPTS OF VALUE

Intrinsic Value

- Δ based on assumption there is a hypothetically complete understanding of its investment characteristics
- Δ on the basis of an evaluation or available facts, to be true or real value that will become market value when other investors reach same conclusion.

Going Concern Value

- Δ under going concern assumption

Liquidation Value

- Δ net amount realized if the business is terminated and the assets are sold piecemeal
- Δ based on assumption that entity will be dissolved and assets will be sold individually

Fair Market Value

- Δ price at which property would change hands between a hypothetical willing and able seller, acting at arm's length in an open and unrestricted market, when neither is under compulsion to buy or sell and when both have reasonable knowledge of the relevant facts

ACTIVE INVESTORS

Fundamental Analysts

- Δ interested in understanding and measuring intrinsic value of the firm
- Δ Fundamentals: refer to characteristics of an entity related to its financial strength, profitability, and risk appetite
- Δ fear towards long term investment strategies
- Δ Activist Investors
 - Δ looks for companies with good growth prospects that have poor management
 - Δ usually do takeovers

Chartists

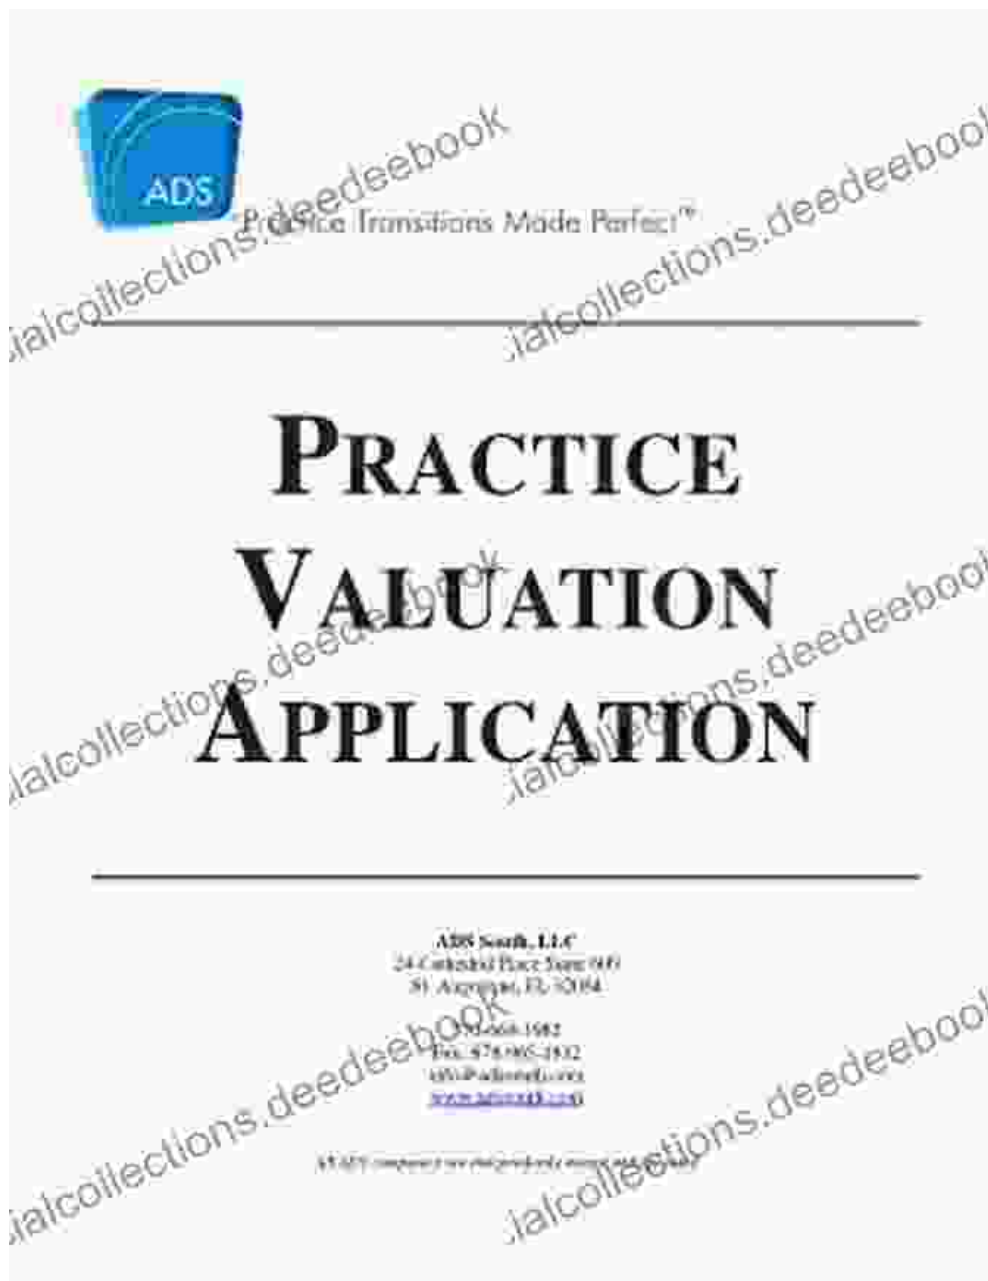

- Δ stock prices are significantly influenced by how investors think and act
- Δ rely on available trading KPIs such as price movements, trading volume, short sales

Information Traders

- Δ more adept in guessing or getting new information about firms and they can predict how the market will react based on this

VALUATION PROCESS

1. Understanding the business
2. Forecasting financial performance
3. Selecting right valuation model
4. Preparing valuation model based on forecasts
5. Applying valuation conclusions and providing recommendation

These tests provide valuable feedback, identifying areas for improvement and reinforcing your strengths.

Step 4: Continuous Learning

Valuation is a dynamic field that constantly evolves. To stay updated, Wiley Finance offers ongoing resources and support, including:
