The couple, who are both in their early 30s, had always dreamed of traveling the world. They had been planning their trip for over a year, and they were excited to finally get started.

They bought the van online from a website called Mercado Libre. The van was a 1992 Volkswagen Transporter, and it was in good condition. The couple paid $5,000 for the van, and they were happy with the price.

The couple packed their belongings into the van and set off on their journey. They drove through Brazil for several weeks, and they enjoyed the beautiful scenery and the friendly people.

After crossing the border into Chile, the couple drove through the Atacama Desert. The Atacama Desert is the driest desert in the world, and it is a very harsh environment. The couple had to be careful to stay hydrated and to avoid getting lost.

After several days of driving, the couple finally reached their destination in Peru. They were exhausted, but they were also very happy to have completed their journey.

The couple spent several months traveling around Peru. They visited the ancient ruins of Machu Picchu, and they hiked through the Andes Mountains. They also spent time volunteering at a local orphanage.

After their time in Peru, the couple drove their van back to the United States. They had an amazing journey, and they were so glad that they had decided to buy a van online from Buenos Aires.
